So, here it is. 747, and all the side by sides in our TVs have come to life. Everybody's home from work. So they're all out driving them in the last few minutes of daylight. I've been listening to them probably for about 30 minutes. We haven't really, really even documented any of the RTV. I mean things have been relative actually surprisingly quiet past couple days. We did have Mr henick, hop in his truck and blow the living [REDACTED] out of his engine he had to be read. He had to be well pass red line I mean he had to literally topped out that engine. Well pass redlining. He did that earlier this morning. So, MIT is worse racket I mean I [REDACTED] felt so sorry for that engine. [REDACTED] [REDACTED] the living crap out of his engine. It's morning, and then later on, you know, then of course late last night we had every you know everybody got off at the same time, and all the haul them tore off that was [REDACTED] And so really I've been documenting anything lately because a I forgot to continually forget to get the SD [REDACTED] in the camera and be, we [REDACTED] kind of [REDACTED] up real quick, we [REDACTED] kind of been giving up. And, you know, it's [REDACTED] ridiculous. You know, it's not you know, I understand a lot, we're [REDACTED] gonna put them and deal with but I mean, does Yeah, I didn't, I didn't sacrifice work my ass off to live on the limit the end of some race track of disguise. And here you see the side by side so I'm gonna see if I can get a photo of this because sells me it's coming this way.
