It's eight o'clock on Thursday, and Doug [REDACTED] flew out onto the highway in his truck. Which means he's not going to work. [REDACTED] out of curiosity, we [REDACTED] pink I've been watching things going up and down the past house and we've [REDACTED] to notice that he only works four days a week. And from what we can tell, the days that he does work. He only works like six hours a day. Now, I do admit that I think it's Monday, he comes in late. But, you know, and so this he may make up for it on Monday, but on most days. He's not leaving his house till you know nine or 10 o'clock in the morning. And then he gets home about four or five.

Then he gets a full time salary for that. And then when he does come, come with road. He goes well beyond the speed limit, he flies. He's moving 90 miles an hour. And, you know, it's [REDACTED] really kinda interesting, it's really nice cushy [REDACTED] I wish I could get a [REDACTED] like that.
